At Trial Of 22 Nazis For Mass Murders, A Jewish Doctor, First Of 250 Witnesses, Sobs Over Auschwitz Camp Horror Story And Some Defendants Yawn

At Frankfurt, Germany, a quiet-voiced Viennese doctor, the first former inmate of Auschwitz to testify at the trial of twenty-two of the death camp's former staff, broke into tears as he described mothers being marched to the gas chambers with "their children clasped to their breasts."

Spectators and journalists also wept at the testimony of Dr. Otto Wolken, aged sixty, a Jew who was prisoner-physician at the Auschwitz camp from 1943 to 1945, says the New York Herald Tribune. An alternate judge, Werner Hummerich, suffered a mild heart seizure. Some of the defendants yawned.

The Auschwitz guards "acted like animals back in the Stone Age — animals that had suddenly tasted blood," Dr. Wolken testified. "Some guards and officials could not sleep well at night unless they had beaten some one to death during the day."

He also testified at the trial in Frankfurt:

Barracks for sick prisoners, built to hold no more than 500, even with eight to a bed, were crammed with 1,200 prisoners lying on the floor and piled on top of one another. Rats nibbled at inmates who died during the night and even at those still alive but too weak to defend themselves.

Thousands of prisoners died of starvation and diseases brought on by malnutrition, while SS (Elite Guard) troops stole their meager supplies and traded them outside the camp for liquor. "Hunger turned us into animals."

"I have often seen prisoners whose bones were visible through their open sores. They died horrible, and painful deaths. Many of the guards took special care to aim their clubs at these sores."

SS officers indicated with "a flick of the finger" whether newly arrived prisoners would be gassed immediately or put into labor camps.

When a group of young women destined for a work camp refused to be separated from their children, the guards finally decided to send them all to the gas chambers. "The women were marched away with their children clasped to their breasts."

Describing this last event, in July, 1944, Dr. Wolken broke down and sobbed.

Among the visibly moved spectators were Arthur Miller, the American playwright, and his wife. Mr. Miller, who said they had come from Vienna and were on their way to Paris, explained: "I just wanted to see this trial," says the New York Herald Tribune. He said he had no plans to use it as a basis for a play. His latest play, "After the Fall," deals in some parts with concentration camps. Mr. Miller's wife, Inge Morath, herself a concentration camp survivor, who was in the courtroom, said later that he had wanted to study the atmosphere in the courtroom "and the characters of the defendants."

Dr. Wolken told of how he had seen one of the SS guards sobbing when the mothers were being marched away clutching their children. He said this guard, whom he identified only as "Schlage," had often played with the children in the camp before they were sent to the gas chambers.

The guard, Dr. Wolken testified without elaboration, later prevented several loads of new prisoners from being gassed immediately after they arrived.

Dr. Wolken testified that the Nazi "death machinery" could not have functioned had it not been for the tens of thousands who voluntarily served it.

Dr. Otto Wolken, who as a prisoner worked in the camp's "quarantine section," told the court at Frankfurt that the Nazis' "method to heal people was to gas them."

With the twenty-two defendants: twenty-one SS (Elite Guard) staff members at the camp; and an inmate who was a barracks supervisor, listening attentively, says the New York Herald Tribune. Dr. Wolken said that survival alone had been "hell" at the camp.

"We had two kinds of guards," he continued. "One group consisted of people who just did their duty. But the other consisted of SS men who wanted to excel. With them animal instincts prevailed. They could not sleep without killing people. There would have been more survivors had it not been for these SS men."

Dr. Wolken's testimony brought the ten-week-old trial to a turning point. He was the first of an estimated 250 witnesses, among them many survivors of Auschwitz, who are expected to testify. His description of Auschwitz shocked many of those attending the trial.

The doctor added that there had been "billions of lice" in the camp, which contributed largely to the great number of inmates who fell victim to typhus. His description of brutal beatings administered to sick inmates lined up in front of latrines brought gasps of disbelief in the courtroom.

Dr. Wolken said his efforts to help other inmates had been made difficult by the lack of even rudimentary medical supplies. "I was given paper bandages and a few aspirins," he said. "This was all for some 5,000 people. The situation was just dreadful.

Despite the lice, the doctor added, the prisoners were given a change of clothing only four times a year. Disinfections of the barracks were frequent, he added. Every time this took place inmates were forced to spend twenty-four hours without clothes.

Dr. Wolken, who was a prisoner at Auschwitz from the summer of 1943 until the camp was liberated by Soviet troops early in 1944, reports the New York Herald Tribune, said that despite his ability to "organize" extra food for himself his weight had dropped to eighty pounds.

Simon Wiesenthal, a private investigator of Nazi crimes, announced in Vienna that he had given an extensive file on a wartime "school for murder" to Austrian authorities.

Mr. Wiesenthal said that an unknown number of the school's faculty and graduates were still at large in Austria, Germany and elsewhere and that he had been assured of energetic legal action.

He said that his file contained "about 14 names," but that he believed a penetrating official inquiry would reveal many more.

Mr. Wiesenthal, who gave up a career in architecture and engineering to become a tracer of Nazi war criminals, underlined his disclosure by stating that Austria's present Chancellor, Dr. Alfons Gorbach, nearly became one of the thousands of victims at the school.

Dr. Gorbach was a prisoner at Dachau, Germany. Between 1941 and 1943 a secret Nazi establishment in a centuries-old castle at Alkoven, near Linz, Austria, turned out cadres of murderers, according to Mr. Wiesenthal.

Dr. Gorbach, who had lost a leg on the Italian front in World War I, was marked for death among the thousands of handicapped "Aryans" of Germany and Austria who were being gathered for the school, he added.

A fellow prisoner saved Dr. Gorbach, Mr. Wiesenthal said, by pleading that he was needed for office work in the camp.

Mr. Wiesenthal identified one alumnus of the Schloss Hartheim school as the one-time deputy commandant of the Treblinka concentration camp in Poland, Rudolf Stangl. Stangl, an Austrian who escaped from prison at Linz in 1948, is now living in Damascus, he added.

The other three training schools, Mr. Wiesenthal said, besides Hartheim, in Upper Austria, were located in Hadamar, in the West German state of Hesse; and Grafenegg, and Sonnenberg, in Saxony, East Germany.

Mr. Wiesenthal said the existence of the four schools was unknown until last year when the Documentation center in Vienna obtained lists of several hundred German, Austrian, Ukrainian, and Lithuanian Elite Guards, says the New York Herald Tribune, who had been decorated with the Iron Cross for valor in "top-secret missions."

"We discovered that these men had been stationed at one of the four towns before they were assigned to the extermination camps," Mr. Wiesenthal said political prisoners, mostly Austrians and Germans, were selected to serve as guinea pigs in the practice gassings.

Mr. Wiesenthal said only a few of the staff of the death schools survived. Most died later in fighting in Yugoslavia and others committed suicide after the war, he said.

He said training methods in the schools were "too horrible to talk

Noted Writer Fled Nazis, Found Americans Unaware Of German Threat

The second life of Hans Natonek, once one of Europe's distinguished writers, ended when he died in Tucson, Arizona, at the age of seventy-one years, where he had lived since 1944, says the New York Herald Tribune. A native of Prague, he received doctorates from the Universities of Vienna and Berlin. In 1920, he began writing a daily column for the Neue Leipsinger Zeitung.

In 1932, the city of Leipzig awarded him the Goethe Prize for his services to literature, which, by that time, included essays, criticism, novels and poetry.

Shortly afterward his books were burned, his name was placed on the first of the Nazi death lists, his first wife took their children and left him because of what she considered the shame of being married to a Jew, and he fled to France.

He fled again before the German army reached Paris in 1940 and he wandered to Lisbon, where he received a visa and passage to the United States.

The beginning of his second life was described in a book, "In Search of Myself," published three years later, which the Herald Tribune called "an impressionistic biography, deeply moving in what it says and definitely captivating in its style."

Mr. Natonek moved to Tucson, Arizona, shortly after the book was published. His later writings included poems, several of which were contributed to the Herald Tribune until he became ill last year. His second wife, Mrs. Anne G. Natonek, survives.

Mr. Natonek was born in Prague of Jewish parentage, and received Ph.D. degrees from the Universities of Vienna and Berlin, says the New York Times. He wrote for the Leipziger Tageblatt, and from 1920 to 1933 was a columnist for the Neue Leipziger Zeitung. He wrote novels, short stories, poetry, a biography, and drama and motion-picture criticism.

When the Nazis took power in 1933, and Mr. Natonek was marked for death, he fled, and became a refugee in Czechoslovakia and France. "In Search of Myself," published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, describes his experiences.

He slept on docks, under trucks, and in the cold fogs of the Pyrenees Mountains. In France the Germans almost caught him.

At length, in 1940, Mr. Natonek reached New York through the intervention of the Emergency Rescue Committee and the President's Advisory Committee.

He arrived with $4 in his pocket, but the National Refugee Service gave him an allowance of $9 a week that fed and sheltered him.

When he told a Refugee-Com-

Bias In N.Y. East Side Co-Op Housing Is Still There Despite Laws

Continuing discrimination against Jews seeking to purchase East Side cooperative apartments has been found in a new study by the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith. Arnold Forster, general counsel of the League, says the study, which is still in process, indicates that a third to a half of such apartments appear to have restrictions against Jews.

Other Jewish service organizations and state and city officials agree that there is evidence of continued prejudice despite laws against discrimination and despite increased civil rights activities, says the New York Times. They also suggest that the problem is probably even greater for Negroes and Puerto Ricans.

Mr. Forster says the findings point to a need for more stringent legislation, including power for the State Commission for Human Rights to initiate investigations rather than await complaints. He also sees a need for more vigorous enforcement and for intensified educational efforts.

Housing discrimination, he says, is part of a pattern that also involves exclusion from social clubs, from some suburban communities, and even from executive advancement in some major companies.

Seymour Graubard, chairman of the A.D.L.'s New York executive committee, tends to regard discriminators as "insecure, frightened people."

The new study has analyzed a random sample of thirty-three cooperative buildings between 42nd and 96th Streets, from Fifth Avenue to the East River, with 1,556 listed tenants.

Thirteen of the buildings had no recognizable Jewish names among their tenants last year; the same thirteen had none in 1958. Seven other buildings had only one to three recognizable Jewish names, the same as in 1958. The picture might be somewhat overdrawn in view of the problems of identification.

A twenty per cent turnover of apartments occurred in the five-year period. In the twenty buildings that had recognizable Jewish occupancy, the ratio of Jewish and

A.J.C. Official Cites Acute Shortage Of Human Relations Experts

American Jewish Committee asserted that most professional anti-Semites were posing as "superpatriots" to infiltrate "ultraconservative organizations." In a special study, the human relations agency charged that religious bigots were directing their appeals to "isolationists, proponents of radical-right measures, pro-Arab apologists."

The results of a year-long survey were announced at the opening session of the annual meeting of the Committee's national executive board at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, in Chicago, Illinois, says the New York Times. One significant finding in the study was that until 1960 most anti-Semitic propaganda, in the form of periodicals, had been published at distant points and then shipped into the South in bulk for local distribution.

The reports said that currently there had been a sharp rise in the amount of anti-Semitic literature originating in the South. The study titled, "Bigotry In Action," is a pamphlet that will be published in the immediate future. The study charged that Arab propaganda in the United States "continues to originate from several sources."

It listed the Arab League's Information Center, with branches in several cities; the Organization of Arab Students, whose 4,000 members are active on many college campuses, and the embassies and United Nations delegations of the Arab nations.

The study held that Arab propaganda "is generally circumspect with regard to outright anti-Jewish activities. The Arab propaganda, the study said, "sponsors' materials which are filled through with insinuations of 'dual loyalty' on the part of American Jews, and with inflammatory references to Zionists, a term frequently applied indiscriminately to all Jews."

Fertile areas for the propaganda, according to the study, have been communities in the South disturbed by racial tensions. The study said:

"Since 1954, when the Supreme Court outlawed school segregation

VOLUNTEERS OF AMERICAN VETERANS OF ISRAEL WANT TO REACH FORMER COMRADES

The American Veterans of Israel, an organization of volunteers (from the U.S. and Canada) who served in Aliya Beth and in the armed forces of Israel (Mahal) during the struggle for independence, is in the midst of a nation-wide re-organization. Through personal contact and publicity, efforts are underway to reach all our former comrades.

We are interested not only in sitting back and reminiscing about those days when our cause was one and the victory won. A vibrant and strong Israel, with its featured role as a homeland for all Jews who so desire, is of deep concern to us. Many of our members are actively involved in affairs that benefit Israel. Some have already gone on Aliya Gimel, for permanent settlement. Others take part in activities that foster American-Israeli relations.

The bond between American Jewry and Israel includes the permanent ties between those of us who returned, and the chaverim (comrades) who gave their lives in the common cause. The appeal of Israel is also the intimacy of companions who endured hardships and sacrifices, then shared the rewards and joys of freedom and liberty.

The American Jewish community is generally unaware of one of the proudest achievements in American-Israeli events; namely, that well over 1,000 of its young men volunteered their services in the crucial days of 1947-48, some to man the rescue ships, others to campaign in the Army, Navy, and Air Force of Israel. At a time when no man was expendable, when every war-time skill was urgently needed, Mahal (overseas volunteers) played a vital part in the final victory.

The A.V.I. has planted a Memorial Forest in the Jerusalem Corridor. We shall never forget the trying yet self-rewarding days spent in Israel, nor our departed members who are remembered every day. Ceremonies are held on the site every Yom Atzma'ot (Israel Independence Day) to remember and honor our chaverim who were killed in action. On April 12 the A.V.I. will hold its annual Yom Atzma'ot celebration in New York. Similar gatherings will take place in cities where members cannot come to New York. For further information about the A.V.I., write to: Sidney Rabinovitch, 110-16 62nd Drive, Forest Hills 75, N. Y.

The plaque, on American Veterans of Israel Memorial Forest, bears these names of American and Canadian volunteers who fell in Israel's War of Independence: Ralph Muster, Leonard Pitchet, Sidney Rubinov, Robert Lester Weeckman, Kalman Pittel, Sally Palkowski, Shmuel Pomeranz, Posner, Carmi Rabinowitz, Harry Rob, Moshe Rosenbaum, Jacob Rothman, Selig Rudolph, Miriam Salpeter, Moshe Schmuckler, Dov Seligman, Irving Sevin, Jack Shulman, Yosef Stadler, Avraham David Stavsky, Shlomo Szigeti, Yechezkel Tesher, Leonard Troyen, Israel Yarost, Marjery Ziff, Moshe Zucker, Samuel Hanovice, Ray Kuntz, Sidney Leizerowitz, Seymour Lerner, Daniel Goodman, Igo Griffel, Fred Gross, Zipora Grunberg, Erich Hellinger, Oliver Holton, Oscar Hyman, Joe Kahn, Jerome Kaplan, Herbert Kermish, Ernie King, Jack Klein, Heinrich Kupperman, Ari Lashner, Alvin Levy, Baruch Linsky, Joseph Mann, David Mickey Marcus, Mandel Math, David Miller, Harold Monash, Howard E. NOTED WRITER FLED NAZIS, FOUND AMERICANS UNAWARE OF GERMAN THREAT mittee representative that he wanted to continue writing, he was answered that he would have to find a job, because writing could be only a hobby unless an author were very successful. He continued nevertheless.

Mr. Natonek told in his book how he found New York's automats, docks, parks, and garment district strange and wonderful. He also found Americans strange; they were kind and hospitable but largely unaware of the ghastly threat of Nazi Germany.

Mr. Natonek earned his first money in the U.S., $2, by shoveling snow. He also washed cars in a parking lot, unloaded trucks, washed dishes, and carried corpses from a refrigerator to a dissecting room.

After the United States entry in World War II, he applied to help the war effort by working in industries, on a road being built to Alaska, on a Vermont farm and in the Office of War Information. But his applications were refused.

His book was called by Orville Prescott in The New York Times, "a true and touching fragment splintered off the vast tragedy of our times," says the New York Times. Several of Mr. Natonek's poems were published in The New York Times.

Great day in the morning

Tomorrow. A great day in the morning. At synagogue he becomes Bar Mitzvah, a "Man of Duty."

Thinking about it makes a fellow's throat feel a little dry.

Will his voice hold up as he reads from the Torah and Haftorah?

Then, there's the party after.

His family, cousins and friends will be there.

That speech he's been writing and rewriting.

Does it sound corny? Should he change it now?

No.

He'll just stand up like he planned and make a special pledge to live up to the highest ideals of his faith.

After his first public speech . . . the fun part.

Opening his presents with "the gang."

One thing sure.

If he lives to be 100, his 15th birthday has to be the topper.

FOR THE "LOVE OF LEARNING" GIVE THE "GIFT OF LEARNING" . . . THE ENCYCLOPEDIA INTERNATIONAL.

Just as the occasion of Bar Mitzvah or Bas Mitzvah becomes a gateway to deepened Jewish loyalty in the lives of young people, the traditional love of learning in Jewish life makes the Encyclopedia International a fountain of learning in their daily lives, at high school today—university tomorrow.

International is a most appropriate gift from parents, grandparents, or from a group of friends.

The INTERNATIONAL is functional in layout, simple in structure and very easy to use. It covers atomic research; takes you behind the scenes in today's race for missile supremacy; probes the changes in geography, topography; explores the political, the economic trends; introduces the latest in automation; in medicine.

And that's only the beginning. It is NOT a re-hash of old subjects but an up-to-the-minute compilation, written entirely from today's perspective.

As leisure activities have expanded, so has their coverage in the INTERNATIONAL—sports, the theatre, music and art. Finally, it is the only inexpensive encyclopedia with a complete index based upon the newest knowledge and terms.

Because it presents the full range of knowledge in our world as it is today and presents it in clear readable terms the INTERNATIONAL truly serves the modern student and his family.

AT TRIAL OF 22 NAZIS FOR MASS MURDERS, A JEWISH DOCTOR, FIRST OF 250 WITNESSES, SOBS

about. These people were trained to kill their own countrymen — Austrians and Germans — so that they would not hesitate to slaughter Jews by the millions. Their senses were kept going with the help of alcohol and women. They had no souls."

A former Nazi S.S. (Elite Guard) officer, charged at Brunswick, Germany, with having murdered Jews, told a court that his battalion masqueraded as a choral society for the invasion of Poland in 1939.

Hans-Walter Zech-Nenntwich, one of five former SS officers on trial for the murder of 5,200 Russian Jews, said his battalion put on civilian clothes and traveled to Danzig a few days before World War II began.

Zech-Nenntwich said that when war broke out on September 1, 1939, the "choral society" put on black Elite Guard uniforms and jackboots and rode into Poland.

He denied the charges of having shot at least eight Jewish women. "I was there but I killed no one," he said.

At another trial in Braunschweig, a former Nazi storm trooper, ex-Sgt. Ott Kielhorn, testifying for the prosecution calmly told how his SS (Elite) Guard unit forced Jewish children to watch their fathers shot to death before being herded to their own deaths in front of machine-guns.

He said the victims were first stripped of their valuables and then led to a ditch and forced to strip to their underwear, reports the New York Herald Tribune. Some of the fathers, "prayed, wept, and sang songs of death," he testified, just before they were machine-gunned.

"The children then were driven into the line of fire of light machine-guns," he said. "We made sure none of them ran off."

Kielhorn, who appeared almost bored at times, testified in the trial of five former SS officers accused of directing the massacre of 5,200 Russian Jews at Pinsk during World War II.

Tens of thousands of handicapped Germans, including children, were killed to free hospital beds for wounded soldiers, Dr. Hans Hefelmann testified at Limburg at the German war crimes trial.

The former Nazi doctor, accused of directing the killings of 70,000 adults and 3,000 children, told the court, "the question of getting beds for wounded German soldiers determined the extent of the killings."

"This was the main reason for the radical euthanasia measures," he said. As the war progressed the "question of getting beds for wounded German soldiers determined the extent of the killings."

Hefelmann testified earlier that he supported the principle of killing the handicapped to "purify" the race and that the program was started in May, 1939, four months before World War II started.

Public health doctors were told to send to his office the names of "incurably sick" children and the mentally and physically handicapped adults, he testified, says the New York Herald Tribune. The prosecution charges they were gassed to death in Limburg and their corpses burned. The prosecutor contended the Nazis paid mid-wives fifty cents to report mentally and physically handicapped babies to Hefelmann's office.

Hefelmann denied ordering the killing himself, saying his office acted only as a clearing house for doctors' reports. He testified that the murdering of adults stopped in 1941, but that children were killed until the third Reich collapsed.

He is the only remaining defendant in the mass murder trial — two are dead and the third fled Germany while free on bail.

A former official testified that the Hitler regime allowed only volunteers to carry out its program of killing mentally and physically retarded persons, says the New York Times.

"No doctor ever was ordered to participate in the euthanasia program; they came on their own volition because they were devoted to the idea of mercy deaths," the former secretary general of the Reich Committee for the Scientific Registration of Mentally Retarded Persons said.

Dr. Hans Hefelmann, a 57-year-old agriculture expert, insisted that the decisive factor in the killings was whether the patient faced excessive suffering. Dr. Hefelmann, who headed a section of the Reich Chancellery, denied vehemently that the Nazi regime observed quotas for killing the weak-minded and physically disabled.

He said 96,000 such persons died naturally in 1938, and that the high rate of natural deaths made

W. J. C. SEEKS WITNESSES TO NAZI CRIMES BY BATTALION 65 POLICE IN POLAND AND DENMARK

West German investigations into the activities of a Nazi police unit, Battalion 65, have resulted in an appeal to the World Jewish Congress in New York to help find survivors of the atrocities of which a number of Battalion 65 members are accused.

The Battalion was stationed in the area of Cracow, Poland, from May, 1942, until March, 1943. During that period members of the Battalion allegedly participated in mass shootings of Jews in the Cracow area, and were detailed to cordon off the site of the executions.

Later, in April, 1943, the Battalion was transferred to Copenhagen, Denmark, where some of the policemen allegedly participated in deporting and shooting of Jews at the Horserőt camp.

Anyone who witnessed these atrocities, or knows any survivors, is asked to get in touch with the Institute of Jewish Affairs, World Jewish Congress, 15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N. Y.

Senior officers of the World Jewish Congress have been summoned by Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president, to attend a meeting of the organization's administrative committee on March 6, in Brussels. The day-long meeting will discuss problems concerning the Jewish community in the USSR and Eastern Europe; developments among Latin American Jewish communities; and a report on various anti-Semitic groups.

Many of the Jewish leaders at the session will also take part in a meeting of the board of directors of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany; and a session of the Conference of Jewish Organizations which will follow the WJC parley.

I remember this wine!

Mazel Tov is a wine that will unlock memories. It tastes like the wine you used to sip many years ago at your parents' table.

Mazel Tov tastes like that because it is made like those wines were made. It is made only from Concord grapes grown on the sunny slopes of the Niagara Peninsula. It is a hearty, richly honest wine. A wine that is as natural with a shabbat meal as the chalah, as welcome at a simcha as a handshake.

Although Mazel Tov is made strictly "Kosher l'Pesach", it is available all year 'round.

it impossible to draw up accurate statistics on who should be killed. It is estimated that 200,000 persons died at the hands of Nazi doctors because they were considered "unworthy to live."

Dr. Hefelmann is the only former Nazi official occupying the dock in the current trial.

Dr. Werner Heyde, a key figure in the Nazi euthanasia program, committed suicide before proceedings were started. A third prospective defendant fell to his death; and a fourth fled the country.

Describing the beginnings of the program, Dr. Hefelmann said a secret circular was issued on August 18, 1939, requesting that all mentally and physically retarded children, three years old or less, be registered with his office.

Based on a report listing each individual illness, a panel of experts headed by Dr. Heyde then decided who would be put to death.

The court asked why the committee did not disclose frankly that it was preparing "mercy deaths."

Dr. Hefelmann said that Hitler ordered the procedure that was used. He added:

"The Fuhrer did not want us to use the phrase 'putting a person to sleep,' although I personally would have had no objections. That is why we had to say we registered them scientifically."

Because the Reich committee and the chancellery were under one roof, Dr. Hefelmann continued, the committee also was allowed to use only a post office address.

Otherwise, he said, "a mother could have brought her idiot child to the chancellery where foreign diplomats and other dignitaries were frequent visitors," reports the New York Times. He admitted that regulations in the secret circular left no room for doubt that parents of the ill-fated children knew what was coming.

The Arab Boycott Misfires, But Still The Arab League Tries

By Arnold Forster, of the editorial board of the A.D.L. Bulletin, publication of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith

At first it appeared that the Arab League boycott had scored a conspicuous success. "Arabs Force Peer Off British Board; Baron From Jewish Family Quits Insurance Post," read the headlines. The London Times gave the story full attention: Lord Mancroft, a British business leader, had resigned from the eight-man London board of the Norwich Union Insurance Societies because he had been advised that his position would jeopardize the company's prospects in Arab countries.

The Arab League, representing thirteen Arab countries, had demanded Lord Mancroft's resignation from the insurance company because of another of his associations — with a British merchandising corporation controlled by Sir Isaac Wolfson, a benefactor of Israel. But the Arab League had little reason to gloat. The reaction was quick and strong. Norwich Union, one of Britain's largest insurance companies, was criticized sharply, by policy holders, the press, and the British government, for yielding to Arab pressure.

The Board of Deputies of British Jews, the representative body of the Jewish community in England, in a letter to Norwich Union, pointed out that the British government had "on more than one occasion made clear its opposition to the Arab boycott of Israel." Requesting a full explanation of the insurance company's action, the Board said " . . . it is regrettable to find such an outstanding company as the Norwich Union apparently prepared to submit to an insidious form of pressure which many other firms have withstood . . ."

R. Bignold, president of Norwich, answered that "we are a mutual organization with policy holders in all parts of the world . . . Our sole object is the promotion of the business interests of our policy holders . . . These business interests include the insurance of world wide trade, and any political impediments to its free flow equally impede the transaction of insurance . . ."

Not satisfied with the reply, members of the Board of Deputies — led by Sir Barnett Janner, its president — met with Bignold and other Norwich officials. They were assured that Norwich Union never had the intention of aiding or comforting the Arab boycott, that the company would do its best to encourage and expand its business with Israel. And — Norwich announced — Lord Mancroft had been invited to resume his seat.

Lord Mancroft, however, declined the offer, saying that a proper working relationship could not be had "after all that has happened."

"I am sure," Lord Mancroft added, "that the implications of your invitation will be understood both at home and abroad."

In America the implications of the Arab boycott for American firms have long been understood; the boycott itself has been mainly a failure. Some eighty-four American enterprises, including such leading corporations as the Bulova Watch Co.; Emerson Radio and Phonograph; Firestone; Eli Lilly; Revlon; and Shell Chemical, have been boycotted by one or more Arab states. Also blacklisted have been world-famous entertainers: Harry Belafonte, Helen Hayes, Eartha Kitt, Frank Sinatra, and Elizabeth Taylor. Few Americans are seriously upset by being placed on the list. In fact, some seem to accept it as a mark of honor.

The ill-conceived boycott has a strange history and purpose. The central Arab Boycott Office in Damascus is a non-governmental organization, responsible to the Economic Council of the Arab League. Its reason for being: to reduce Israel's military potential and to undermine the very foundation of the state by ruining its economy.

Regional committees exist in all Arab countries, connected with the central office, but under the actual orders of each country's government. In Egypt, for instance, they come under the War Office; in Iraq, under the Foreign Office. The committees make recommendations for boycott, but it is up to the various governments to implement them or not.

Although such a system has obvious defects — there is no real coordination between the various boycott offices and governments — there are psychological advantages. If, for example, an industrialist receives a threatening letter from the Central Arab Boycott Office, and within a few weeks gets similar letters from local committees in Alexander, Kuwait, or Beirut, the very lack of coordination serves to give the impression of concentrated attack.

The threatening letter sets forth Arab boycott "regulations," compares the "limited market" of some two million Israelis in their tiny country, to the vast expanse of Arab countries with their eighty, ninety or a hundred million inhabitants (they are not exact in their figures), and warns that to do business with Israel is to forego the Arab markets.

If a firm does not give in to the threat, and if the Arab country concerned has no need for its product, the company may be included in a blacklist. There have been blacklisting cases in the following categories:

—Ships that anchor in Israel's ports and carry goods to or from Israel.
—Firms which invest money in Israel or provide technical know-how, as well as firms which establish their general agency for the Middle East in Israel.
—Firms marketing Israel export goods abroad.
—Firms whose wares bear the Shield of David as a trade-mark (although many firms with no Jewish connection use such a trade-mark.)
—Films that depict anything favorable about Israel or Jewish history, or in which appear actors who have expressed sympathy for Israel.
—Persons whose sympathy and support for Israel have become known.

Sometimes Arab boycott officials resort to subterfuge. They will announce that they have taken a firm off the blacklist which has never been on it or they will write to a company which has never invested in Israel and is not contemplating such action. When the company writes back to that effect, the reply is released to the press to demonstrate that still another firm has been stopped from cooperating with Israel.

With speeches, threatening letters, blacklisting, and other tactics, the Arabs hope to give an impression in the world of finance that nobody can stand up to the Arab ire once it is aroused. Propaganda broadcasts and articles try to create a picture of a tottering Israeli economy, completely isolated in the international scene.

Although some firms have given in to this psychological warfare, the Arab boycott has failed to undermine Israel's economy. If anything, it has forced Israel to strengthen some aspects of its economy.

The remarkable growth of Israel's merchant marine, for example, is undoubtedly due in part to the refusal of its neighbors to trade with it, forcing Israel to look further afield for markets and sources of supply. It has not been possible to assess the losses inflicted by the boycott; when one company refuses to invest in Israel or enter into a knowhow agreement, other companies come forth to offer the same facilities on the same conditions.

Some firms have compared the limited but solid business they are doing with Israel with the theoretical opportunities of Arab markets — and decided against Israel. The Renault Automobile Company of France was such a company. Yielding to Arab dictates in 1959, it cancelled an agreement with Kaiser-Ilin of Israel to deliver automobile parts for assembly in Haifa.

Arab League officials cited the case as proof of the success of their boycott. What happened next was reported in the November 20, 1963, issue of the German publication, Der Spiegel.

First, the Israeli auto company did not passively permit the abrupt cancellation. It demanded compensation and in an out-of-court settlement, Renault agreed to pay $800,000. Then, the company found Arab markets less attractive than had been promised.

It discovered that a "guarantee" of 17,000 Renault cars to be purchased annually by the Arab League was a myth; that Nasser's proposal that the company erect an assembly plant in the Egyptian port city of Alexandria was also not honored. The Italian Fiat concern received the concession for the plant instead. And, to add to its problems, Renault's retreat from Israel seemed to affect its most important export market — the United States. In 1960 the firm sold 60,000 less Renault cars in the United States than it had the previous year.

According to Der Spiegel, Renault, late in October, made overtures to return to Israel, to both manufacture and sell its cars.

Where Renault gave in and now seems to regret its mistake, other concerns have treated Arab boycott threats with indifference from their beginning. There are numerous examples of firms which have stood up to "Arab ire" and are continuing business with Israel and the Arab states. Arab behavior in face of resistance to boycott threats is usually opportunistic. Any economic organization with something to sell, be it special know-how, quality or extending payment facilities, has little to fear from these threats.

Moreover, comparisons of business with Israel and the enormous chances Arab markets are supposed to offer, have shown that the advantages on the Arab side were mainly imaginary. Israel offers a substantial market well out of proportion to its size — in certain branches of trade it exceeds that of all the Arab countries put together.

In the absence of military action, Arab leaders had hoped that the boycott would be a main weapon against Israel. Despite its ineffectiveness to date, they show no signs of giving up the boycott. However, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency Bulletin recently reported that Lebanon had informed the Arab League Secretariat that it opposed a conference of heads of the various Arab countries. According to JTA, "economic sources in Lebanon have for some time contended that the boycott was hurting Lebanon and the other Arab countries more than it was damaging Israel."

The London Daily Telegraph, in its review of the Mancroft case, concluded that "the whole sorry incident" had served a "useful purpose" in showing up Arab blackmail attempts. The Financial Times said that the boycott weapon had "misfired badly" and now had lost much of its effectiveness.

But still the Arab League tries . . .

AUDIENCE IN FRANKFURT IS SILENT AT PLAY, "THE DEPUTY"

An awkward silence greeted Rolf Hochhuth's controversial play, "The Deputy," from a capacity audience of 1,000 attending its local premiere in the City Theater in Frankfurt, Germany. The play's critical slant at the attitude of Pope Pius XII to Hitler's persecution of Jews — the cause of demonstrations in Basel, Paris, and other theatrical centers — raised not a single boo or catcall. As the final curtain fell, timid applause started but faded into complete quiet.

No demonstration had been expected in this traditionally liberal city, but the police took special measures to cope with any possible trouble, says the New York Times. A dozen detectives mixed with the audience and more were posted in the lobbies of the theater. A nearby police station was on the alert and, backstage technicians were ready to focus floodlights on possible centers of unrest in the audience.

Frankfurt is the second German city to stage "The Deputy," which had its world premiere in West Berlin last year.

non-Jewish tenants appeared to have remained constant, raising questions about possible quota controls.

Interviews in the staff study, Mr. Forster said, found estimates by one experienced real estate executive that a "hard core" of one-third to one-half of East Side cooperative apartments have restrictions against Jews, says the New York Times. These were said to be mainly buildings built before World War II.

The responsibility for exclusions is attributed to boards of directors that reserve the right to vote on a would-be buyer. Questionnaires can bring out religious and ethnic backgrounds indirectly by probing into club and fraternal affiliations.

The study found one woman apartment seeker who asked last month if questions on church affiliation implied any religious restrictions. When she acknowledged that she was Jewish, she reported, she was told there were no restrictions but "you would be much happier if you look for an apartment in another building."

Formal complaints to enforcement bodies "never truly reflect the depth of the problem," according to Bernard Katzen, vice chairman of the State Commission for Human Rights.

The average purchaser able to pay $25,000 to $150,000 or more for an apartment may not want others to know he has been rejected. Moreover, construction of new buildings has eased the pressure for apartments.

The state agency has had four complaints on refusals to sell cooperatives to Jews. Complaints in 1956 and 1957 in Manhattan cases were found to lack probable cause; two others in 1962, one in Bronxville and one in Greenwich Village, were upheld and resolved in conciliation action by Mr. Katzen.

The City Commission on Human Rights has had fifteen housing complaints from Jews since 1958. Ten were withdrawn or found unsubstantiated, says the New York Times, four resulted in respondents' pledges against discrimination, and one was upheld despite a contest.

Farewell, Farewell To The Battle Of The S.S. Shalom

The Israeli state-controlled shipping line gave in to the rabbinate's demand that non-kosher food not be served along with kosher food on the Shalom, Israel's new 24,000-ton trans-Atlantic liner, says the New York Times. The arrangement does not preclude the Shalom's closing her kosher kitchen and serving non-kosher food only, on some sailings.

Another Zim liner, the Jerusalem, has been doing that for winter Caribbean cruises. The rabbinical supervisors have been put ashore before such cruises, rejoining the ship afterward to make the necessary ritual preparations for a resumption of religious dietary observance.

The ship, which is to go into operation next month, had been designed with two kitchens to offer travelers kosher or non-kosher meals.

However, until the Zim Israel Navigation Company finally promised that the Shalom would sail with a kosher kitchen only, Chief Rabbi Itzhak Nissim had refused to authorize rabbinical or issue a kosher certificate.

The surrender came in the form of a letter from the head of the company's management to Israel's Chief Rabbi Itzhak Nissim, requesting that he issue rabbinical stamps of approval for the ship.

The battle over the Zim Lines' flagship has raged in Israel for more than a year since Zim announced that the new 24,000-ton luxury liner would have two kitchens — one kosher and one non-kosher, says the New York Herald Tribune. The company explained that to attract both Jewish and non-Jewish passengers and thus pay its own way, the Shalom would have to cater to varied culinary desires and that a strictly kosher cuisine would not suffice.

Orthodox Jews in the U.S. and overseas objected vehemently and Israel's Chief Rabbinate indicated it would never give aproval to a two-kitchen ship.

Premier Levi Eshkol's government was split on the issue. His and the Ahdut Avoda (Unity of Labor) party both favored the own Mapai (Israel Labor) party two-kitchen idea. The National Religious coalition party members opposed it.

Though Zim is a public corporation, the government is a major shareholder and a partner in the Shalom. Any Zim action would ostensibly reflect Eshkol policy.

When the much-sought-after approval was obtained by Zim through an independent American rabbinical group, it was denounced by the Israeli Rabbinate and other leaders throughout the world, who hinted at an Orthodox boycott of all Zim ships, says the New York Herald Tribune. The Rabbinate is now expected to agree to grant the kosher stamps of approval on condition that the one-kitchen arrangement be permanent.

A.J.C. OFFICIAL CITES ACUTE SHORTAGE

the promoters of religious hatred have increased their activities in the South, where a resurgent Ku Klux Klan and more newly organized racist groups have provided channels for fomenting anti-Semitism."

The general issue of the race crisis both in the North and the South was given extensive attention by the Committee's executive board.

Dr. John Slawson, executive vice president of the agency, called for a nationwide training program to cope with the "acute shortage" of human relations personnel, reports the New York Times. He said that just as the trained labor mediator filled the need for skill in resolving the "power struggle" between labor and management in the 1930's "so the expert in intergroup relations must now be equipped with special background and ability" to help reduce community and group tensions.
